Desire to Avoid Ministerial Plea for Animals Made by Crisis Shown—Sales Tax Former Governor Baxter May Be Modified of Maine in Australia

> PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 29 (Special) -Percival P. Baxter, former Governor of Maine, who recently was in Sydney, Australia, prepared a statesection for radiocasting from that city. He writes that there is a strong protest against a vivisection movement in Australia and that "it is hoped to accomplish something before it is fastened on the country

In his statement he said: The people of civilized countries have just begun to realize their obigations toward the creatures of the animal kingdom. From time im-memorial cruelty, indifference and neglect have reigned almost unchecked. Only recently, compara-tively speaking, has any considerable number of persons taken up the cause of animals and birds, and progress has been slow and painful. However, during the past 100 years more has been accomplished than in all previous centuries. It should be remembered for all time that a Britisher, Richard Martin, was the first great leader who had the courage and ability to speak out in Parlia-ment and boldly champion the cause of God's humbler creatures.

I have been told that the States of Australia have adopted comparatively few humane laws. I am conident, however, that Australians are kind hearted people and that once they understand, the animal cause will be given the full measure of support it deserves. It needs the full backing of Australian men, omen and children.

Many American states have laws hat require the teaching of humaneness in the public schools. An hour, or a half hour each week in the early grades is devoted to this subject. It children are started with the right point of view toward animals and taught kindness toward them, they become better citizens, violence and revenge will be eliminated from their natures and a dis and toward universal protherhood and uitmate World reace.

The opponents or vivisection have a long and thresome journey before them, but their cause is a great one. It is just. In my country only to years ago human slavery seemed im-pregnaole. That, as well as other great wrongs, have been or are being overcome. To-day noble men and women are fighting the cause of their brother animals, a cause that will not down. Vivisection

To win this fight requires patience, courage, raits. The light of reason, or conscience, or the near must be let into dark places. The state of Maine has made a beginning by enacting the first law prohibiting vivisection in the public schools. Australia now has an opportunity to lead in humaneness, to set an example to the world in prohibiting within her borders, vivisection or living animal experimentation of every name and nature.

OBTAIN RELIEF

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 29 (Special)-Delegates from 11 states in the corn belt area made a declaration at the Mid-West Farm Conference here which they declare, presages a political upheaval unless Congress takes prompt action toward meeting their demands for farm relief legislation.

Speakers from seven states made it clear that a nation-wide campaign against the protective tariff would be made if agriculture is not afforded the same benefits that are accorded other industries.

New "Political Map" Forecast William Hirth, president of Missouri Farm Clubs, aroused enthusiasm when he declared that unless the Federal Government affords agriculture the relief demanded there will be an upheaval that would change the whole political map for the next 50 years.

A plan for a Federal Farm Board that will aid in the stabilization of agriculture must come out of the mid-West farm problem conference, John Hammill, Governor of Iowa, told the convention.

Such an organization, he said, would provide the necessary machinery for taking care of the surplus, "if industry and finance are to expect the men who are engaged in agriculture to feed the people of the

Pointing to the fact that Congress is now in session, the Governor declared that "agriculture has waited in patience for relief," but that it had not been forthcoming, and that the time for action had arrived.

Department of Agriculture Discusses New Way to Aid Farmer in Readjustments

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 - Reconstruction of the land policy of the United States so as to check undue expansion of farm lands is urged by the Department of Agriculture as a means of assisting the farmer in making his readjustments.

Systematic direction of land settlements and utilization and a carefully co-ordinated plan of developoperation of federal and state gov-capacity, and capable of carrying up to 4,000,000 feet of lumber, in logs

New lands have been brought into and squares, on each trip. ships, arriving as fast as they can cultivation while the produce from be loaded and dispatched, will keep the mills at Wiggins and at D'Lo old farms is without a satisfactory market. This practice should not be continued, the department sets forth, to place two of the vessels in operacalling attention to the small returns tion in the spring with sailings every 17 days and later two more ships farmers are now receiving. Farmers' Income Average

After paying interest, rent, taxes and money expenses, it is estimated that the net cash income of American farmers for the crop year 1924-1925 averaged only $510, plus an average consumption of food from the farm valued at $336. This return represented what farmer operators investment of $5043, and as wages for the labor of themselves and their families. An allowance for the labor of the farmer and his family at average wages for hired farm laborers besides what the farm supplies to the family living would leave no interest return whatever on the farm operator's capital. In fact, the averfarm family would have lacked $184 of having anything to apply as interest on their capital investment. It is contended that certain forces, notably the pioneering tradition and the resulting overexpansion of farm areas, have put agriculture on an income basis much below that of of the "fundamental principles" of other economic enterprises. Farm-the Dickinson bill, together with ers are not yet in a position to obtain a reward for their labor and a return on their capital commensurate with the wages and returns to capital and enterprise elsewhere.

The department says that in general new land should not be brought into use until it will earn a return for capital invested in improvements and for labor, equivalent to the returns to capital and labor in other branches of production. Public bodies, while not undertaking the restriction of freedom of the individual, should nevertheless restrain this tendency by every legitimate means.

Judge Crosby Swears in 304 New Members to Massachusetts Bar

Judge John C. Crosby of the Supreme Court today addressed 304 new members of the Massachusetts Bar who were sworn in by John F. Cronin, assistant clerk. Among the successful applicants were 15 women. This musical comedy may be taken as giving the musical world one last look at the greater Strauss. It contains music of the surpassing beauty of line, color and characterizing power that marked the period of "Don Juan" and "Till." It contains also passages distressingly obvious and commonplace. Moments of ex-quisite loveliness and of gorgeous orchestration are followed by measures through which grimaces the vulgarity that spoils the "Sinfonia between Sophie and Octavian in the nd and third acts, and those of all three of these characters in the final act. There is real depth of emotion in the Princess' monologue, real tenderness, and real grief at the tenderness, and real grief at the boy's unceremonious departure. The embarrassed meeting of the young people in Faninal's house, the charming ceremony of the presentation of the rose, and the deepening of affection between the youth and the girl are mirrored clearly and exquisitely in the music. Here the use of woodwind and cellos is particularly bril. wind and cellos is particularly brilliant. Somewhat less inspired, perhaps, but still effective, is the musical revelation in the last act of the girl's love, the boy's struggle, and the woman's renunciation.

It is curious to reflect that these are all scenes of sentiment. One wonders how a composer who is capable of the buffoonery that intervenes be-tween such scenes, and of the lack of taste shown in his later works, ild have written music at once so lovely and so free of mawkishness.

Besides these passages of real originality, the themes depicting Baron Ochs, borrowed from modern Viennese waltzes, seem comparatively dull; yet it should be remembered that they do rather successfully characterize him; and perhaps they characterize him; and perhaps they make it easier for the man who has been led to the opera house by his wife to sit out the performance.

IOWA HAS SEVEN MORE CONTESTS

on the Basketball Squad This Season

IOWA CITY, Ia., Jan. 29 (Special)-With the Intercollegiate Conference basketball season well under way, University of Iowa is turning Its at tention to its seven remaining games in the "Big Ten" races, having won men from last year for his aggrega-tion, and is developing two of his re-serves into competent "Big Ten" players. Although handicapped by

The team is captained by C. H. McConnell 27, right guard, McConnell was one of the mainstays of the Hawkeye team last year and shows genuine improvement. He has been given wide recognition and should rank with the best in the "Big Ten." McConnell that a break either way would have tied the score in the game that meant so much to the visitors.

Mc-Connell is a great floor guard, and in captain is a clever dribbler and works well on offense, standing next to the forwards in the scoring column.

Hogan a Regular Guard Barry's other guard this season is R. H. Hogan 27, who was a reserve last year. Hogan's style of defensive play greatly resembles that of McConnell, and the two form one of the best guarding combinations in the Conference. Hogan is very fast, and specially skilled on long shots at the basket.

Iowa's reserve strength is improv-ing, since the entire second team of last year has returned, together with several promising sophomores. P. E. Smith '27, gridiron captain-elect, is a Smith '27, gridiron captain-elect, is a strong reserve guard who promises to win a place on the team. He is tall and fast, and a clever floor player. Other promising guards are W. T. Swenson '26, a veteran; R. O. Armstrong '27, and F. W. Lawson '28 speedy sophomore who may also be used at forward.

The loss of Leonard Raffensperger '27, center, who has been kept from '27.

The loss of Leonard Raffensperger '27, center, who has been kept from the court, was a blow to the team. Harold T. Miller '27, reserve center last year, probably would have handled the pivot post at any rate, for Coach Barry thought more of Raffensperger's defensive than his offensive ability, and had planned to use him at the guard "post now occupied by Hogan. Miller shows marked improvement on offense, and his power fitted him for the position as roving center. C. C. Keel '28, a reserve center, has possibilities, but looked slow in his work with the seconds. Swenson, subwork with the seconds. Swenson, substitute guard, has been used occasionally at center.

Lost Two Former Captains With the graduation of H. M. Janse 25, and J. A. Laude '25, brilliant forwards who captained previous Iowa quintets, Coach Barry was forced to shift G. L. Van Deusen '27, running guard, to a forward position to strengthen the Iowa offense.

Van Deusen was one of the team's leading to coach lest year and is the leading scorers last year, and is the chief cog on offense now. He shows a good eye for the basket, and is quick and speedy. The other forward is being handled by L. L. Harrison '28, former freshman captain. Although small, Harrison is a hard player to guard and shows to better advantage as a floor worker than a scorer. He is being pressed by G. C. Phillips '27. substitute last year, who is one of the fastest and more accurate basket shooters. Erratic floor work is all that kept Phillips off the regulars, and he is almost certain to occupy Harrison's forward post in parts of most of the Conference games. Other forwards are W. O. Gamble '28, and Lawson. The

W. DOBBS WINS BRITISH SKI CHAMPIONSHIP

WENGEN, Jan. 15 (Special Correondence)-The annual championship meeting of the British Ski Club, won by W. Dobbs, was held this year partly at Gstaad and partly at Wengen, the snow conditions at the former place being suitable only for that portion of the championship contest which dealt with form and style in ski-running. For the straight long-distance run, which must take place on a course allowing a descent of from 3000 to 4000 feet, recourse was had to the femous skiing grounds of had to the famous skiing grounds of the Scheidegg, the favorite resort of skiers from Wengen, just above which they lie. The course chosen was be-tween 3½ and 4 miles in length with a total descent of 3600 feet. Starting from the summit of the Lauberhorn, it ran, with many sharp twists and turns, through Scheidegg, near to the Bellevue Hotel, and down over the snow-covered pastures of Postiglen and Nattlen, to the edge of Itramen Wood.

PEAK RAIL SCALE

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP) - Restoration of the peak wage scale of 1920 for conductors and trainmen of all railroads in the United States is sought by union leaders. Local unions have been instructed to file schedules of wage increases next Monday and to request an answer in writing by March 2. In the event that any company seeks to present modified proposals, local unions are instructed to go into con ference and to submit the final proposition to headquarters. schedules have been issued by A. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway & Trainmen, and L. E Sheppard, president of the Order of The new wage would mean an in-

Household Arts, Crafts and Decoration

Planning the Family Budget

TOW much should one spend for food, shelter, clothing, housekeeping, recreation, and amusements, education and personal luxuries? How much ought one to of an income should be set aside as savings? These, and many other simllar questions confront the modern young people, or parents with families. While authorities on the "cost of living" and students of household economics have developed a mass of useful information which serves as a useful guide when planning family expenditures, nobody else's plan will exactly meet a special case, and the questions asked above cannot satisactorily be settled by one family for Systematically planning for future expenditures is called "budgeting" and a family budget is a very excellent institution-if lived up to. It lemands, as a sine qua non cess, absolute confidence between husband and wife, and the loyal cooperation of every member of the family. B.fore a budget can be properly planned, it is necessary that one know something of what the cost has been in the past for food, rent, housekeeping, operating a car, education, amusements, and other expenditures necessary to family life and activity, for without this knowledge one is not in a position to decide the maximum and minimum limits to be set for each of these classes of expenditure. For this reason, household accounting and bookkeeping should really precede budget making. Too often, however, it is the lack of proper accounting methods in the home that makes the establishment of a budget system an urgent necessity. This being the case, the author will take up the matter of budget making before looking into some simple methods of keeping household accounts.

Classify According to Functions Failing the existence of household accounts which may be taken as a basis for drawing up budget require ments, it would be well to keep very detailed records of those expenditures that are more or less unknown for a period of one month. This ap plies particularly to food. It is really surprising how many people are week or a month for food. Then old bills and other records will help one. But in the main it may be necessary to rely on memory and the assistance of other members of the family. When all that is likely to be helpful has been gathered, one can truthfully estimate the family requirements for the next 12 months.

This introduces the question as to how one should classify a budget. Any attempt to budget by items will prove useless and a failure. By items are meant meats, flour, books magazines, soap, theaters, bread, and so on. One's mode of existence does not naturally fall into such divisions, but rather into functions. The obvious needs of humanity in the order in which they present themselves are, first, food, which is admittedly the first human requisite to daily existence; then shelter, and then clothing. Thus are completed the three great human needs. With these adeuately met, man can exist. modern civilization demands more than these primary needs, so the expense of operating the house and all that pertains to housekeeping must e considered next. Then the matters of education and culture have to be provided for, in so far as these are helped forward by money expenditure. And so one goes through the list of obvious needs and r quirements of men and women unti one arrives at the strictly personal needs and luxuries. It is these broad divisions or functions that should be considered in budget making.

A Typical Budget

It is necessary, however, for the critic or the student to know how they arrived at these figures, so one must take each of these classifica-tions individually and see how they were made up:

Making Adjustments It doesn't matter how carefully budget is worked out, after the first of operation it will be found that adjustments are necessary. If one examines the graphic presenta-tion shown here, it will be seen how adjustments are taken care of properly. The two people in our illustration found that the amount of "pocket" money originally budgeted for, was insufficient, and that they spent for this purpose $70 more than was allowed for in the budget. It is obvious that that amount had to come from somewhere, and the probshall be taken from. In the same way, they discovered that they had not allowed sufficient for clothing, and they spent $40 more than was provided by the budget. The problem is how to readjust their budget plan to the best advantage of all rightful claims. Are they justified, for example, in reducing the amount of their monthly savings, as is shown in the right hand portion of the

The line of division between recreation and education is not always sider the theater as an educational feature, which it, doubtless, often is. These and similar questions must be carefully thought out and decided by the individual or the family. Any expenditure in excess of the amount budgeted must be immediately adjusted (that is, at the end of the month in which it occurs) by reducing the budget figure under some other classification, by the amount of the excess expenditure. This is a form of family discipline that stimu-

How to Sew

A book valuable in more or less measure to every woman has been. issued by the Pictorial Review Company, New York. It is called "The Mary Brooks Picken Method of Modern Dressmaking." In the introduction Mrs. Picken says that dressmaking should be considered as "so many simple steps to be taken one by one." Her system, accordingly, is to make clear and easy each separate process and after these are learned singly the student will find, almost to her surprise, that she has mastered the art of dressmaking for she has only to combine the various processes to produce a costume.

Thus the reader is instructed regarding implements, the use of the machine, the character of different fabrics and how to handle them (including some delightfully simple directions for shrinking), seams, stitches, bindings, godets, ruffles, tucks, pleats, hemstitching, buttonholes, sewing on lace, methods of appliqué, the use of patterns and the use of dress forms. Copious and clear illustrations accompany a lucid text. Finally is given a résumé called "Steps in Making a Dress."

The treatise leaves no room for criticism and has value even for women who do not intend to make clothes. Some sewing every woman must do and very often she blunders along a difficult path. Just to learn to select her tools properly, to take her stitches correctly is to gain ease and speed in winning satisfactory results. Mending, darning and the alteration of children's clothes receive a share of attention, sweeping into the circle of the book's public women of almost every interest and

John Bunyan and Book Talk It Over

JOHN BUNYAN certainly wrote for his contemporaries; but I had until lately thought of him as one who was little concerned with the success of his book except as a moving tract for the conversion of singless. I may even conon of sinners. I may even con version of sinners. I may even con-fess my ignorance of the sequel to "Pilgrim's Progress"; it stood on my shelf, but I had never read it; I had rested content with the successful culmination of Pilgrim's trying jour-ney, and considered not at all the wife and children he had left behind him. I forgot that he had a wife and children "So I saw in my dram" children. "So I saw in my dream," wrote Bunyan, "that the Man began to run: Now he had not run far from his own door, but his Wife and Children perceiving it, began to cry after him to return; but the Man put his fingers in his ears, and ran on." At ment I was sorry for his family; then, as the pilgrimage proceeded, I forgot all about them, and so apparently did Christian himself.

But in due season Bunyan remembered that deserted family. A great and miscellaneous public demanded, once upon a time I purchased, and put on my shelf, and only the other evening ever took down again. So I came upon Master Bunyan comtant of the company of t enting on the career of one book His Second Part of the Pilgrim"in an ingenious and interesting diaartificial as it might have been with another writer, for Bunyan thought, if ever a man did, in personifications, and to set his book talking was but allowing his imagination to function in its most normal manner. Wagner's Home Near Lucerne

HALF-HOUR walk from Lu-A cerne brings one to a partly wooded promontory known as Triebschen, where for six years Richard Wagner found a very pleasant and secluded home, and where he wrote several of his famous operas. The villa Triebschen, as Wagner's home was sometimes called, is now surrounded by beautiful gardens. Young orchards are growing in the once open spaces; old forest trees spread their broad branches protectingly near the house he once loved, and tall poplars stand guard. As an aid to out-of-door composition, as well as for comfort, solitude, and inspiration, Wagner hardly could have selected a more delightful home anywhere. On three sides of this lit-tle Triebschen promontory the open lake reflects every mood and tem-perament of humanity, as well as every change of weather. Straight in front, peaceful Rigi gleams in the sunshine; to the right stands Pilatus, luring the storm-clouds; and, to the left, Lucerne promises an occasional touch with the busy outer world. The John Bunyan, who seems by this shrewd and cheerful presentation a more "practical author," as we say nowadays, than I had imagined; nor had I ever thought of the Pilgrim, or even more remotely conceived that his author could think of him, as a ligure to make the Company smile. ury in draperies, tapestries, and rugs of exquisite texture and design. Russia Makes First Use of Esperanto on Stamps

New and Forthcoming Issues From Malta, Canada and the United States

THE Russian Government has just issued a stamp with the inscription in Esperanto, this being the first time the language has been officially used on a postage stamp of any country. The stamp is of large size and shows a portrait of Professor Popov, a scientist of wide repute for his research work in wireless telegraphy, and the wireless masts in the background are an appropriate addition to a well-balanced design. The inscription reads: "Inventisto de Radio—Popov," and the value is 7 kopek, blue, printed on the new watermarked paper and perforated 13½. It is interesting to note that Esperanto is now being taught in Russian schools.

Malta is to have a new pictorial series, and the remainder of the existing issue is then to be overprinted.

There would appear to be a good deal of artistic license allowed to designers of postage stamps, and there are many well-known cases of glaring mistakes in the subjects adopted for the stamps of different countries.

The latest is to be found in the design for the 5 cents value of the Norse-American Centennial issue which shows a type of vessel which existed some 900 years ago, or about the time when Leif Ericson is sup-posed to have sailed from Norway con his voyage of discovery, and flying the Stars and Stripes. Now as the national flag was officially sanctioned by resolution of Congress on June 14, 1777, there is obviously something wrong here. Eighty years ago D'Arcy McGee was a fugitive with a price upon his head, and the story goes that he escaped to the United States in the guise of a priest. Thomas D'Arcy McGee, statesman, journalist and poet, is to adorn one of the values in the proposed new issue for Canada. This is to be a series embodying the portraits of Canada's greatest citizens, including McGee, Baldwin, Lafontaine, Sir John MacDonald and Sir Wilfred Laurier, and might very aptly be called the "Makers of Canada" series.

D'Arcy McGee was born at Carlingford, County Louth, just a century ago, and his father was in the coastguard service. Later the family coastguard service. Later the family moved to Wexford, and here the future statesman received a very fair education. Then as always the United States was the goal of thousands of young Irishmen, and at 17 McGee emigrated. Entering the office of the Boston Pilot as a clerk, he soon found a post in the editorial department, and in due season became editor of the paper. His reputation as a writer and speaker attracted the attention of Daniel O'Connell, and through the "Liberator's" influence he was appointed the London correspondent of the Freeman's Journal. Reading, literature and poetry held greater attractions tracted the attention of Dahiel O'Connell, and through the "Liberator's" influence he was appointed the London correspondent of the Freeman's Journal. Reading, literature and poetry held greater attractions than listening to Parliamentary debastes, and the connection with the Freeman terminated. In 1847 we find McGes acting as the secretary of the Iriah Confederation, and taking an active part in preparing the literary matter for the Young Ireland movement. This procured him the attentions of the authorities, and he was arrested, to be released later on Escaping to America, he founded the American Celt in Boston, sold his Miss and taking for me to fan her, in his procket-book Wild-Wind came galloping dam poor Mrs, Miggs."

Glad

Until I chose Bradenton I was a roamer—never satisfied.

Bradenton's beauty, sunshine and laughing, happy folks won me "for keeps."

This center of Florida's most fertile farming section was founded by substantial sons of the soil. I like a substantial place. Not one but many crops of lettuce, celery, and tomatoes are raised here in a season. Flourishing orange and grapefruit groves abound.

Of course the tourists and those pleasure bound soon discovered our happy haven.

Now Bradenton is the mecca of pleasure seekers on the west coast of Florida.

Choose your sport—golf, fishing, surf bathing, boating—we have them all. Wonderful hard roads reach out in all directions. Two railroads and the Tamiami Trail bring "all roads" to Bradenton, including the daily boat 'cross beautiful Tampa Bay.

Substantial buildings and magnificent homes abound. Why shouldn't I be glad I chose as I did? You'll be, too!

EXPORT UNIONS FORM IN JAPAN

Industrial Guild Act Promotes National Business Activity

TOKYO, Jan. 2 (Special Correspondence) — Fifty - two "export unions" have been organized under the recently promulgated Staple Exports Industrial Guild Act, and have applied to the Central Government for sanction. Although none has as yet been sanctioned, the Government is expected to take this sten in the is expected to take this step in the immediate future as regards all such unions which are found to be on a firm financial basis.

The act under which these export unions are formed is a result of the strenuous efforts of the authorities to encourage and increase Japanese manufactures. manufactures and exports. It provides that firms engaged in the same trade may organize unions, or guilds, which will undertake the joint purchase of raw materials and the sale of finished products; make arrangement for the inspection of goods so that set standards will be maintained; under supervision of the Government jointly see to the selection, packing, transportation and storage of goods; regulate production, packing, transportation and storage of goods; regulate production, ment aid; improve their products; provide for arbitration of business disputes; handle rebates; protect and encourage inventions; control special privileges; promote fairs and exhibitions, and make joint use of trade-marks. manufactures and exports. The 52 unions which have been formed represent 12 prefectures and the following industries: Cotton textiles, woolen textiles, silk textiles, watches and clocks, manufactured metals, celluloid, porcelain, enamel ware, glass, matches, lacquer ware, straw braid, toys, buttons, brushes, lead and fancy mats.

No Soldiers to Be Found Among Vienna's Toys

Vienna has unlearned its soldiercwiff, in fact and in fancy. Austria has, relatively, the smallest army in the world; Vienna's largest toy shop had not a single soldier's suit on hand during the Christmas shopping season. A search in the smallest revealed the same absence. Not a uniform, not a fort nor a toy cannon, and no tin soldier. From what the shops have to sell—which is, of course, a result of the demand—little Viennese boys will satisfy their instinct for 'dressing up" by donning a fireman's uniform or "playing indian" disguised in a multi-colored feather headdress and a girdle of wampum. The Indian suits are old favorites, desired chiefly through reading James Fenimore Cooper and, more recently, seeing wild west motion pictures.

Trains and Ships and Shops

POSTUM CEREAL EXPANDS

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—The Postum Cereal Company, which recently has been expanding its lines of, food products, is reported in Wall Street to have made an offer of approximately $88,000,000 for the California Packing Company, whose shares have been one of the strongest features of stock trading this year. If this offer is not accepted, bankers identified with the California company have indicated that other negotiations now pending may lead to a large packing merger including compaines in the east and on the Pacific coast.

Dealers to Ask Elimination of Many Sizes and Styles to Reduce Costs

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 27 (Special Correspondence)—The program of the National Tire Dealers' Association for the current year, according to Herbert A. Ruhnke, president, of Milwaukee, includes co-operation with Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Com-merce; the National Rubber Association, the manufacturers, and the Na-tional Automobile Chamber of Com-merce, in an effort to bring prices of automobile tires down to normal.

"We believe," said Mr. Ruhnke, "that Secretary Hoover's proposals are useful, and are heartily in accord with them. We have good reasons to say that there are many sizes and styles of tires which can be eliminated, and this will tend to reduce costs, and therefore prices. without any injury to the automobilists, nor to the trade or manufacturer. "There are at present too many sizes

"There are at present too many sizes and types of passenger car tires. We propose to recommend to the manufacturrs, as an association, the elimination of some of them, thereby alding in the reduction of the consumption of crude rubber.

"On the other hand, we recognize that while crude rubber increased nearly 400 per cent since a year ago, and there have been several advances of prices of tires, the total advance in tires does not average more than 50 per cent. All factors in the trade have co-operated in reducing costs.

"The comparatively small advance in the prices of tires is partly due to the fact that early in 1925 tire makers worked on the basis of comparatively cheap rubber prices, contracted late in 1924.
"Tire factories and retail shops are being run more efficiently now than ever before. The smallest particles of crude rubber are picked out of sweep-ings, even, and cleaned and separated by special processes, and put into work. Trimming of tires has never been done so carefully and neatly. "Chemists and engineers are discovering new processes and short cuts that permit high-priced rubber to go further than before. This is good news to the motorists, for it means that when rubber prices finally come down, tires will be better and cheaper."

Reasons For Gain

Operating expenses actually increased only $265,059, with the result that the ratio to gross was only 73.9 per cent contrasted with 76.6 per cent in 1924 and 80.5 per cent in 1923. In short, the operating ratio was the lowest since 1917 when it was 72.2 per cent

To the lower basis of operating expenses, reductions in cost of fuel and some supplies, absence of any unusual difficulties affecting transportation or industry and general efficiency of op-eration contributed in large measure. In only one year in New Haven's history have gross earnings been higher than in 1925. That was in 1923 when they reached $133,940,586, While the volume of traffic measured in ton miles set a new high record, the fact that gross earnings did not quite touch the 1923 peak may have been due to some change in the character of the traffic or slight modifica-tions of rates in certain directions. While passenger revenue showed very little increase over 1924 it is perhaps encouraging to note that losses in that direction have been checked and that the last few months of 1925 registered fair gains over the corresponding months of 1924. Railroads in most sections of the country, with the possible exception of the southern roads, have been showing losses in passenger business due to bus inroads. But the railroads of New England, particularly the New Haven and Boston & Maine are taking aggressive steps to stop these inroads by opera-tion of their own busses through sub-sidiaries, and winning back of some business which had been diverted. Maintenance Not Neglected That New Haven did not hold down operating expenses by scaling down maintenance is evidenced by the fact that maintenance expenditures totaled $44,622,357 in 1925, an increase of $1,-162,986, or 2.6 per cent over 1924. They took 33.7 per cent of gross comparing with 34.1 per cent in the previous year. This represents a fair average of maintenance expenditures in operating results the New Haven is still considerably short of earning the return on its valuable property recognized by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Transportation Act as fair. The rate of return last year was only 4.75 per cent on the tentative valuation, plus addi-tions and betterments since the date of valuation.

The following shows the course of New Haven's earnings for 14 years:

Keen Shipper Demand-Heavy Cows Wanted-Porcine Trade Improves

chicago, Jan. 29 (Special)—Fat steer prices after being pounded sharply lower a week earlier came back, upturns of 50 to 75 cents on weighty steers placing such kinds at new high levels since the first of the year. In instances the advance amounted to $1, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agricultural

It was largely a shipper market, owever, and the upturn was attrib-table to broad shipper demand for the lost part, a feature which left com-

most part, a feature which left common and medium short fed steers of value to sell at $9.25 downward in about the same price niches they occupied a week earlier.

Weighty steers sold upward to $11.75, load lots topping for the week at $11.60. The trade on yearlings was brisk and choice, but no prime kinds made $12, although a few had enough quality and condition to land above $10.75.

Cows and Helfers Up

Replacement prices continued high, although the cold weather slowed down country demand, and lower prices were apparent late in stockers and feeders, the bulk of which sold earlier in the week at $7.50 to $8.50, with half fat yearlings at $9.50@10.25. The latter were capable of going immediately into the feed lot on an intensive feeding program.

tensive feeding program.

The improvements in steers helped heavy cows and helfers, the latter advancing 50c. The recent scramble for canners, cutters and common cows continued, but a heavier undertone developed at the close.

common cows and choice offerings, coweyer, are still rather sharply out if line, the former selling around 5.25, as contrasted with $7.50@8 on he latter.

All interests wanted hogs. Receipts showed some contraction, and eastern shippers bought more extensively. As the local large and small killers rather regularly stayed in the market, upturns of 35 to 65 cents were apparent at the close, as contrasted with a week again.

Il grades and weights shared the ul rn. packing sows becoming scaucer and gaining as much as butchers. Lard exports have been running heavy recently, and the domestic trade on all pork products is broad. The average price locally reached $12.50 when all interests were in the market, the highest of the season. Average Prices Higher

Average Prices Higher

Butchers scaling 160 pounds sold upward to $13.25, and 300 pounds averaged upward to $12.30 as the week closed. Marketings remained sharply under a year earlier, and the prices sharply higher, last week's average cost at Chicago being $12.06, as contrasted with $10.39 a year ago. The fat lamb trade, owing to excessive receipts and down-turns in the dressed product, continued to go from bad to worse, losing an additional 25 cents during the week, fat lambs are $1.50 to $2 under the opening days of January. Marketings at Denver indicate that the Colorado movement is getting under ful swing, the supply from that source tompeting with liberal loadings from the corn beit, thus creating a critical ituation which has uncovered receipts considerably in excess of a year earlier, and naturally has depressed the market.

Fat lambs were on a $14@14.75

being the narrowest of the season.
Heavy lambs—kinds averaging 100

Among the Railroads

By FRANKLIN SNOW THE New York Central's two lead-I ing trains, the Twentieth Century and the Southwestern Limited will carry The Christian Science Monitor in their club and observation cars, arin their club and observation cars, arrangements having been made with G. H. Ingalls, vice-president. The Century is a 20-hour train to Chicago, leaving New York at 2:45 p. m., and the Southwestern Limited is an all-Pullman train recently put on a faster schedule to St. Louis. It leaves New York at 4:45 p. m., arriving St. Louis 5 p. m. next day.

It was recently announced that the Century did a gross business of $10,-100,000 in 1925 the train heirs over.

Automatic Train Control Of the so-called "independent" man-ufacturers of train control equipment. which is being installed on various railroads, the National Safety Appliance Company's device has met the requirements of the Interstate Com-merce Commission on three roads. Favorable reports by the commission's examiners have been made on the installations on the Southern Pacific; Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio, and the St. Louis-San Francisco.

K. E. Kellenberger, eastern manager of the company, states that an inspection of its control system is being made on the Missouri Pacific. A fifth road using this type of device is the Chicago & Alton, the Bostwick system being an intermittent inductive control. gave its approval of the Regan device on the Rock Island Lines, and a report of the Norfolk & Western's Railway's of the Norfolk & Western's Rahway of the Norfolk & Western's Rahway installation was announced. The device of the Union Switch & Signal Company, used by this road, costs $4500 for each engine equipped, and nearly $2000 a mile for roadside equipment, which, including a signal system installed, ran the total cost up to $1,00,000 for a 106-mile division. Other train control devices, on which the Interstate Commerce Commission has reported favorably, show costs of only a fraction of this sum. The engine cost, $4500, is considered unusually cost, $4500, is consider Employees of the Pullman Company have been given the opportunity to purchase stock in the company at a total cost of $121.78 a share. The present market price of the stock is around $170. The company offered the stock at $140, which, plus interest charged and minus dividends credited, reduced the net cost to about $122 a share. The only basis offered is share. The proposed is share. Carry is in line with that of other com-panies in making partners of their employees.

Save-for-Travel Grows

The "save-for-travel" plan is progressing rapidly, according to Harold H. Braddock of the association. Steam ship lines and railroads are preparing to place advertisements in their timetables and banks are also displaying posters. The plan benefits all participants, the banks through receiving additional accounts, the transportation additional accounts, the transportation increased travel companies through increased travel and the individuals through system-atic saving with a trip when a specified sum is accumulated, if desired. The average length of time which the accounts run is 50 weeks, many paying interest on these. The banks prefer them to the Christmas clubs, which involved withdrawals of large sums at one time. More than 550 banks now participate, the central

Unified Freight Terminals

The joint use of terminals in various cities offers the possibilities of huge economies. Savings effected in this manner would accomplish much that is expected from consolidation of the railroads, for it is through the reduction of terminal costs that the eatest part of such economic

In New York, the port authority has prepared a plan for such unification, following a recommendation of the Interstate Commerce Commission eight years ago, according to Julian A. Gregory, chairman of the port authority. The inland freight stations alone, proposed by the authority, would save shippers $12,000.000 a year in trucking charges and the railroads trucking charges and the railroads would enjoy direct savings of $2,000,-000 yearly, he said. "Terminal facilities," Mr. Gregory "Terminal facilities." Mr. Gregory added, "are antiquated, congested and uneconomical in New York and consequently expensive to all who use them." It has been pointed out that them." It has been pointed out that carriers opposing consolidation of the railroads could effectively break down the principal argument in its favor by co-ordinating their freight terminals, for it is through this source that the only economies of any size can be effected in a general consolidation.

Financing by Bonds The Florida East Coast Railway, which is enjoying a prosperity which should make it readily possible to raise capital through sale of capital raise capital through sale of capital stock, continues to finance new improvements through bonds. When present work is completed, it will have made a cash outlay of $95,000,000 contrasted with a total funded debt of $49,000,000 in October, 1924. The line will be double-tracked to Miami during the present year, while new equipment including 85 mountain-type locomotives have been purchased within the last year or two. Other roads, as rapidly as their earnings permit, seek to finance their new construction through stock rather than bonds.

Of Interest to Travelers

A three-day personally conducted motor trip is offered by the Sante Fe as a side trip en route to California, effective May 15, from Las Vegas, N. M., to Albuquerque, touching at Santa Fe and numerous Indian pueblos. Closed automobiles will be provided for this 300-mile trip, available to passengers on the California Limited and the Navajo both east and westbound. The Florida East Coast established a record between Jacksonville and Miami, 366 miles, of eight hours, 50 minutes, with a special carrying guests to the opening of the new Miami-Biltmore Hotel. The time from New York to Miami, 36 hours, 20 minutes, was likewise a record

Out came the Metropolitan comedians upon the stage tonight— Michael Bohnen as Pantaloon, George Meader as Harlequin, and Louise Hunter as Columbine. With them appeared other graduates in foolery, notably Max Bloch, as the ing space in the main action, managed to distinguish himself. The victory, with an artist taking a minor Showman; and numerous initiates, whose names will doubtless be known seasons hence. Out came cerrôle, is a matter of seconds in many cases. This was chiefly due to some illuminating remarks made by Mr. Sokoloff before the performance. He declared the symphony expressed the effect on a British soldier—Bax effect somenow would not ring true. Hearing with understanding, the audience was profoundly impressed.
With its meaning and purpose made

The Schubert Symphony also moves the present reviewer to certain reflections, but of different tenor. Not many pieces, classic or modern, are so imbued with lyric charm. No need to talk about that. But how often should we hear this symphony, and other equally fa-miliar favorites? How often should any tale, no matter how delightful, be retold? Can one bring to the hearing of music so nearly known by heart any mood more stimulating than one of placid enjoyment?

Recent soloists in the symphony concerts have been the soprano, Florence Austral, who possesses a big, fine voice, but hardly a sufficiently vivid style for the "Immolation" scene from Wagner's "Twilight of the Gods," and Alexander Breitlevilly and accomplished Brailovsky, an accomplished pianist, who was much applauded for his effective playing of the Grieg con-

On the contrary, the fine balance of the body of players seemed disrupted, the excellent ensemble of recent playing weakened, and the general working out of detail somewhat careless. There were moments when the symphony was merely tawdry and commonplace.

With a bound, however, the orchestra redeemed itself with the Strauss: here was distinguished "working out," perfection of detail, and a unit of expression.

For sheer beauty of playing, the piece de résistance of the program was the suite by Sowerby, the American composer. Mr. Ganz prefaced the playing of the suite with a few words to the audience, giving high praise to the work, and rating Sowerby one of the most poetical of the American composers.

After the mood established by the Sowerby, at once exquisite and sthereal, the Siavonic Dances, a bit earthy in their texture, had the effect of an unwarranted obtrusion.

At the same concert we heard "Episode at a Masquerade," by a Polish composer, Karlowicz, whose promising career was prematurely cut short. This composition was left unfinished, but was completed by the practiced and sympathetic hand of derstanding how to make the music help him to achieve his purpose. Nobody else stands so clearly free of prompter and conductor as he; nobody else attacks the opening note of a passage of recitative or of an area or lets to the final note with Fitelberg, who was an intimate friend of the composer. The instrumenta-tion is rich and vivid, as in all the orchestral works of Karlowicz. An other novelty at the same concert was Ravel's Spanish Rhapsody,

AIR COMPANY WORKS AT LOSS

Balance Sheet Reveals, Even With Subsidy, Shortage of £15,000

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Jan. 18-Aviation circles have awaited the first balance sheet of Imperial Airways with much interest. It was anticipated that a loss would be shown, which proves to be the case. The state subsidy for the first year amounted to £139,409, and with this there is an adverse balance of some £15,000. Although the accounts are for one year, the report recalls the fact that for the first month, owing to the dispute with the pilots, nothing was earned, and only skeleton services were operated during the following month. Added to this, a considera-ble period was spent in reorganization, and much trade was snapped up by foreign competitors. The loss is calculated after providing for an obsolescence reserve of £22,998.

In the subsidy arrangement for 1926 there will be included a sum of £93,600 in consideration of the Egypt-India service. The company's fleet of airplanes has been increased, and in the spring it is hoped that the new three-engined machines will come into regular use. The form of subsidy has been altered. Originally it was fixed on a minimum mileage of 800,000 per year, and this has now been changed to 425,000,000 horsepower miles per

On the original plan the smallpowered machine carrying half a dozen passengers could earn as much subsidy as the latest twin-engined airplane carrying, say, 20 people. Under the new scheme the big machines will earn their subsidy in proportion to their horsepower. Thus a twin-engined machine with engines of 450 horsepower each will earn twice as much as a machine with a single engine of the same power. A sum of £117,743 is given as the cost price of the company's aircraft and engines. Taking the obsolescence figure at 20 per cent, this will allow of a complete fleet renewal every five to six years. The first year of the company was bound to be a hard one, owing to the fact that the machines of the four com-panies then in existence had to be taken over when many of them were nearing the obsolescent stage,

Safeguarding of Aircraft then moved his machine into the Business Developing in Importance

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Jan. 18-In the course of a visit the other day to the office of time; but the instructor admitted the Aviation Insurance Group the that even a brilliant pilot, aware writer saw a check, made out payable to a firm of airplane constructors, in settlement of a claim in respect of the loss of a machine. The amount of the check considerably exceeded £5000, and since in this case the engine had been saved and there had been neither bodily injuries nor third party damage, it was a striking instance of the value of insurance. Within a few minutes a claim was received in respect of jewelry lost in transit between Lonon and the Continent.

In fact aircraft insurance is an ctive and growing business; and all the men who control it in Europe and in America are closely asso-ciated. In the United States, Horatio Barber, one of the pioneers of Brit-ish aviation, and who was the original prime mover in aviation insurance before the war, is the principal, and he is in close association with the London "market," which, on account of its unequaled experience, influences this class of insurance in all

As a safeguard of the public and as an influence always exerting pressure for sound design, construction, and piloting, and against their op posites, aircraft insurance is at this moment probably at least as potent a factor as government regulations; and there are many who believe that most, if not all, government restrictions and regulations could safely and wisely be withdrawn, leaving common sense and the pressure of insurance to procure the best interests of all concerned.

Three Engineers Favored

At the outset one discovers that the insurance group is far in advance of government regulations, for better rates are quoted for machines embodying certain features which are in no sense directly encouraged by the Government. The Air Ministry long ago expressed sound sentiments in favor of three-engined machines, but beyond that was powerless to encourage them. Insurance rates, however, are lower for machines with three or more engines than for single-engine types, and it is safe to say that in a little while the differentiation will be more marked than it is today.

Insurance is one of the heaviest charges on aviation, and anything which reduces this charge is of the greatest importance. Thus the antistall gear, the heavy oil fuel engine, and all-metal construction receive special favor, which must erelong tend toward making their adoption universal.

A Small Risk

clause was abandoned in ordinary insurance, for it represents an exceedingly small risk, and yet it is retained while other and far greater contingencies are ignored. If this were not the case how could the insurance group quote the present terms? For example, a private More striking is the fact that men

Test pilots are in a very few cases insured at an annual rate, but generally are given special terms according to their job; and of course While Belgium had only 12,000 according to their job; and of course one in this case includes structural damage to machines in landing. Passengers by airplane pay only 1s. per light in which airplane risks are regarded in comparison with other They are, of course, heavier than fire risks, but they are measurable and are on the decline.

A Personal Experience

One personal experience, briefly told, will illustrate the point. The priced heavy cars. present writer, many years ago, was flying one of the old pusher biplanes of that period when he plunged into thick fog. In a few seconds he had lost all sense of direction and locality. He decided to land at the first possible place. He came to flat grass, but almost immediately was confronted with telegraph wires, with the result that he continued to wander about. Then he rediscovered the telegraph line, and decided to land just beyond it. But no sooner was he just over the wires than he landed right side up, and with no more damage than a broken skid.

When instructor and the mechan ics came up a few minutes later, guided by his whistling, they, could scarcely credit it except on the as-sumption that he had landed and position in which they saw it! As a matter of fact, if the second line of telegraph wires had been visible when the pilot cut off his engine, he would not have dreamed of landing It was ignorance of the situation which enabled him to do what he did. The machine could do it at any of the situation would not have at-tempted it. Clearly one could enlarge upon this instance and the lessons it teaches. The present sys-

The victory in the Senate of the friends of the World Court will, in the end, make for international harmony and the intelligent association of nations. It is neither so revolutionary a change in American foreign policy as some insist, nor is it so sweeping a victory over the foes of internation-alism as the heavy vote-76 ayes to 17 noeswould indicate. It is important chiefly as an indication that public sentiment as reflected in the conservative United States Senate is turning away from the narrow parochialism which followed the World War and is able to contemplate the United States in its own place in the family of nations without falling into a panic.

Of the reservations attached to the resolution by the Senate, the greater number are mere explicit statements of facts or conditions inherent in the protocol itself. No advocate of the original resolution believed that its ratification allied the United States with the League of Nations, or made it a party to the Treaty of Versailles, or entangled it in the political policy of a foreign state, or caused the abandonment of its traditional attitude toward purely American questions. There is no reason why doubts on the questions should not be set at rest by the unequivocal language of the reservations, but there was even less reason for the doubts to exist. They were conjured up and played upon to serve political ends.

The fifth reservation, however, is of more importance. The Monitor's dispatches from London yesterday gave expression to certain British disapproval of this section, and even noted some apprehension that it might be the cause of the rejection of the United States by the forty-eight nations constituting the Courtwhich we do not for a moment believe. The section thus complained of reads:

That the Court shall not render any advisory opinion except publicly after due notice to all states adhering to the Court and to all interested states, and after public hearing or opportunity for hearing given to any state concerned; nor shall it, without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest.

The first clause of this reservation is unexceptionable. As the only force that can be given to advisory opinions is the moral effect due to wide publicity, the Court would scarcely render them other than publicly. But the second clause, denying the Court the right to consider a cause in which the United States is interested except with the consent of that nation is at least unfortunate. Advisory opinions have no binding force. They will be promulgated only for their moral effect. But if every nation followed the lead of the United States, every nation, undertaking a course of conduct inimical to the general welfare, could escape even moral reprobation by refusing to permit the Court to consider the facts at issue.

Whether all the other forty-eight nations are more confident of their political virtue than the United States may be doubted. However, the great American republic stands alone in demanding that it shall itself be the sole judge whether its acts shall be subject to an impartial scrutiny and a report to the world as to their propriety and justice.

Even more doubtful in its effect upon the efulness of the Court, so far as the United States is concerned, is the supplementary resolution which prescribes

That the United States approve the protocol and statute hereinabove mentioned, with the understanding that recourse to the Permanent Court of International Justice for the settlement of differences between the United States and any other state or states can be had only by agreement thereto through general or special treaties concluded between the parties in dispute.

In other words a dispute between the United States and Italy, for example, could not be considered by the Court until the United States Senate, by a two-thirds vote, had so agreed. Had Italy held to such a doctrine at the time Corfu was bombarded that island would now be Italian territory.

While those who are sincerely desirous of transferring international disputes from the tribunals of diplomacy or war into the more rational atmosphere of a tribunal of international law will deplore these two restrictive reservations, they will nevertheless find encouragement in the Senate's action as a whole. It is a step, halting and hesitant indeed, but still a step, toward a fuller brotherhood between the United States and the rest of the world. It is incompatible with narrow and bigoted isolation. If the Court shall progress along such lines as shall demonstrate its worth to the world, and at the same time quiet the apprehensions of timid Americans, it will be only a question of time when American participation will be fuller and less grudging.

Like all other movements toward universal harmony, this one of an international tribunal must develop slowly. It must prove its case as it goes along. What is really important about the action of the Senate-action which never would have been taken save for the guiet and effective pressure applied by President Coolidge—is that it assures at least the friendly assistance of the United States in making this demonstration complete. •

Just as in the commonwealths of the western section of the United States, where there is a

Irrigation and Flood Control

determined effort being made to conserve and harness the waters of the Colorado and other rivers, so in the south and southwest, constructive thought is being given to an undertaking by which it is hoped to impound the flood waters of the Arkansas River and its parallel or tributary streams. This latter project, which has not yet attracted the attention which has been devoted to the Colorado River plan, for instance, vitally concerns the interests of the people of Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Alabama and Mississippi. As is usually the case in sections where flood control presents a serious economic problem, it is related, in at least a part of the states named, to that of drought pre-

Quite wisely it has been undertaken, in the Arkansas River basin, to arrange for the control of tributary rivers and streams by the several states affected, and to unite these efforts in a larger plan to conserve and control the waters of the chief river of the watershed. This would be undertaken, it is now proposed, by establishing a flood control unit at Pueblo. Colo., a second, work upon which has already been begun, at Wichita, Kan., and a third on the North Canadian River in Oklahoma. The cost of the undertaking, perhaps somewhat roughly estimated, is $72,000,000, which shall be met, it is proposed, by assessments levied upon the industries and lands which will be immediately benefited. But this direct charge would eventually be written off, it is said, in advantages assured and in the revenues derived from power supplied to industries and cities adjacent. The benefits would be felt even in the territory bordering the lower Mississippi River,

But there is in both the projects referred to, as well as in the projects embracing the utilization of waste waters in every part of the United States, the related problem of commercializing the power generated. There has been a tendency, it seems, to inject into the solution of this important problem the matter of state rights. While it may be conceded that the economic development of such projects as those of the Colorado and Arkansas rivers cannot be undertaken except through an agreement entered into by the several states affected, there persists, too often, the determination of the people of one or more of the states concerned to reserve to themselves some real or fancied economic advantage. There is a tolerably safe and sound basis which should be considered. It is that with these projects once developed and in operation there is being manufactured and placed upon the market a commodity that represents a clear gain over what was once a complete loss. This commodity, in the form of horsepower, again becomes a waste product the moment it is not utilized to its last unit. The people of a particular state or section are not benefited, their own needs being supplied, by permitting the potential energy to go to waste. No state right is being infringed by transmitting this surplus power behind the state lines, any more than by shipping beyond the territorial borders the grain, butter, maple sugar, or potatoes which the producers themselves cannot consume.

No single individual among Japan's progressive statesmen has attracted more favorable

Japan's

attention in the Occident within recent years than the late Premier, Viscount Taka-akira Kato. For more than three decades, without interruption, he held an important place in shaping and directing the domestic and foreign policies of his country. It was in the year 1894, when he was comparatively unknown except among the powerful and influential political leaders of Japan, that he was appointed Minister to the Court of St. James's. At a later time he was again assigned to that mission, his title being Ambassador. Previous to his elevation to the office of Premier, in 1924, he had four times held the portfolio of the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Writers of biography will find in his picturesque and romantic career all the material they desire for the building of an interesting story of the survival of the industrious and the worthy and the rise of a conscientious and dependable youth from obscurity to the seats of the mighty. He was a consistent and determined defender of Japanese nationalism. His long residence in England, perhaps, led him to a keener appreciation of British ideals than he would otherwise have had, but the concessions he found it wise or possible to make in this direction, as indicated by the terms of common agreement embraced in the former Anglo-Japanese Treaty, never caused him to yield what many in the Western world have regarded as his irreconcilable attitude toward all things American.

The weaver of intimate romances in the careers of the great and near great will be able to adapt and rewrite whole chapters from that of Kato, boy and man. His parental name was not Kato, but Hattori, that of an inconspicuous family in the city of Nagoya. Sometime during his youth he was adopted as the son and heir of Toshiebei Kato, who had no other apparent object than the perpetuation of the Kato name. It was to the influential and wealthy house of Iwasaki that the youthful Kato owed his opportunity for advancement in finance and politics. He had been graduated from the Imperial University in Tokyo and had entered employment as a clerk. He attracted the attention of the elder Iwasaki, who believed that a great career lay before the young man. Conforming to what is a common Japanese custom, the elderly sponsor arranged an alliance by which his daughter became the wife of the ward.

How well the astute Iwasaki judged has been shown by events with which the people of the whole world are familiar. The family alliance thus formed was extended until there were interlinked and interwoven many of those who have, in recent years, had a large part in shaping Oriental affairs and policies. Baron Shidehara, recently Japanese Ambassador in Washington, was a brother-in-law of the Premier. A daughter of Viscount Kato became the wife of Secretary Okabe of the Japanese Foreign Office, while the latter's sister is married to the senior proprietor of one of Japan's most powerful and influential newspapers. A second daughter of the Premier is the wife of a member of the imperial household.

Thus there have been combined in an inner circle, as it were, those who have had large part in directing, during a critical period in world affairs, the national and international policies of the powerful Island Kingdom. The sudden change which has come will, almost inevitably, portend important readjustments in a government where those changes have been frequent. There has been, in the recent past, marked cleavage between the faction comprising the financial and industrial magnates, on the one hand, of which Baron Kato was the leader, and that embracing the Satsuma and Choshu clans, regarded as the militarists and bureaucrats, on the other. The issue figuratively joined with the accession of Viscount Kato to the Premiership evidently remains undetermined.

The words "college" and "collegian" have recently gained in certain forms of the literature of the day-in daily newspapers, in comic magazines and in current slang—a significance that is deplored by college faculties, by the more earnest students and by the growing portion of the public which appreciates the value of higher education. It is unfortunate that too many people associate "college" only with baggy trousers, flashy neckties, grotesque hats and other eccentricities of dress and manner, which a certain number of students affect just now. If one looks below the surface, however, it is possible to see indications that the manifestations which have given the words in question their present-day meaning are not characteristic of the majority of young collegians and should not be allowed to prejudice the public against institutions of

"College" and "Collegian"

Without doubt a wave of exaggeration and extremeness is evident among college boys and girls at present. But this tendency in dress and conduct is by no means confined to them. It is noticeable in society at large. The great mass of men and women, however, go about their daily tasks and enjoyments in quite normal fashion, slightly, if at all, touched or influenced except in their sense of humor by the extravagant eccentricities of the flamboyant minority. The same condition exists in the colleges. The enormous increase in college attendance is not caused by a rush of youth who hope to wear strange clothes or indulge in queer conduct. An overwhelming majority of the throngs of youth that are swelling the numbers at American colleges are after education, the training of their best and highest talents.

From the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College comes an official report that a great decrease in physical defects has been noted in examinations extended over the last decade. At a recent hearing before trustees of Ohio State University the witnesses agreed that the student body at the university has improved morally year by year and is now at its highest point. It was declared that the students are 'continually, progressively and constructively at work in dealing with their own problems."

Testimony of captains of industry and finance is significant on the point in question. It has been common knowledge that leaders in business have been seeking out college men for several years with increasing intensity as the best material for future managers and executives. That they find more than bagging trousers and moaning saxophones on college campuses is shown by the fact that they are contributing thousands of dollars annually to middle western colleges and universities for specialized work in research laboratories. An asphalt company helps toward the study of asphalt materials. A chemical manufacturer gives financial aid for study in commercial chemistry. One big producer of railroad equipment maintains twenty scholarships for specialized training in agriculture.

Scholarships and fellowships of this kind at the University of Wisconsin amount annually to $21,762, at the University of Minnesota to more than $25,000. For study of meat packing processes at the University of Chicago a gift of $2500 a year for three years has been made. At the University of Illinois about thirty-five of these scholarships covering a wide variety of subjects are provided. At other institutions subjects thus encouraged include fire insurance, merchandising, advertising, textile manufacture, mining and animal industry. When the practical leaders of business, industry and finance give to "college" and "collegian" the significance implied by these concrete acts, the general public can afford to do likewise and to forget the temporary, superficial meaning emphasized by the thoughtless and the frivolous.

Editorial Notes

Anyone who does not get a certain thrill out of an Associated Press news item published the other day must surely be impervious to emotional sentiments altogether. It told of the wireless contact established between Moscow and the United States, when some American radio stations were heard in the Soviet Republic. This sentence is almost a classic:

Out of a thick, snow-laden atmosphere this morning Russia had the pleasure of listening to "The Star-Spangled Banner" across 5000 miles of space.

Though America and the Bolshevist administration are not vet on formal diplomatic speaking terms, who shall say that a bond has not now been woven between them? Despite bad atmospheric conditions, one reads, the reception was exceptionally clear. Does not this, too, presage the oncoming of the era of "On earth peace, good will toward men," in regions which heretofore have been thought of by many as almost beyond the pale?

One can hardly read the platform drawn up by the American Indians who attended the Northwest Indian Congress, held not long since in Spokane, Wash., for the consideration of the Palefaces, without acknowledging that it contained much truth. "You think our dress and painted faces funny," read one plank, which continued, "Your girls dress and paint funny too." Then another paragraph contained this piece of excellent moral advice, "How would the Indian like to be treated? How would you like to be treated? That's the way we want to be treated." Incidentally the convention afforded a splendid opportunity for the tribes to thresh out their problems with the white man, and such names as Chief Two Guns, Bird Rattler, No Coat, Jean Little Dog, and so on, were frequently heard on the convention

On Traveling Fellowships

On the banks of the Seine, near St. Cloud, and surrounded by the Bois de Boulogne, is a corner of Paris which the tourist never sees—the gardens of the President d'Honneur of the Autour du Monde Club.

Be passing, but the practical problem of liquidating its responsibilities lies before us.

If we believe in self-determination in the Orient, we must be prepared to do more than utter phrases: the

They are perhaps the most wonderful gardens in Paris: you are led from a French garden to an English flower garden, and round to a stretch of Vosges forest land; from that to a Japanese garden with a Japanese house, a bridge, and those miraculous miniature trees whose cultivation is a Japanese secret.

You leave the Japanese garden and every trace of it to enter a Chinese section, with pagodas and houses, so exact in their effect that, for the moment, you might think that Paris was left behind, and that by some magic you were in Peking. Those gardens represent the international hought of the Frenchman who owns them-Albert Kahn.

Every year M. Kahn sends a Frenchman, an American, and an Englishman traveling round the world to study different races, and to try from increased knowledge to work for a better international understanding. M. Kahn has transcended the prejudices of race: he has overcome the lesser loyalties of nationality.

In one of the houses of his gardens he has a private film projection room, and there you can see the wide range of personalities who have at one time or other enjoyed his hospitality: Lord Balfour, Tagore, Rudyard Kipling, Mahomet Ali, H. G. Wells and many a distinguished American wisitor to Paris.

M. Kahn hopes by means of his traveling fellowship to induce in other men his own catholicity of taste. For a year I have so traveled, and I am attempting to give my impressions of the results. I am not sure that they are according to schedule.

I started out with a respect for theories; I have returned with a respect for facts. In nothing, perhaps, have so changed as in my attitude to Wilsonism and selfdetermination. I started accepting self-determination, like most young radicals, as a vital belief, a new religion added to the faiths of the world. I was prepared to re-echo the words which President Wilson addressed to the House of Representatives and the Senate when he said that selfdetermination was not just a phrase, but an essential fundamental which, in future, statesmen could only ignore at their peril.

I went East; faced actual conditions. I saw that the words of Wilson were suggestions cast into the maelstrom of human life. The task was left for us, poor humans, to relate them, if possible, to the texture of living. What would self-determination, if it were adopted thoroughly, mean in Egypt and India today?

Is the suggestion that the end would be gained if all the foreign administrative machinery were withdrawn? If so, then in Egypt self-determination would probably connote the rule of a Circassian minority over a vast illiterate

In India, as Gandhi himself confessed to me, any form of self-determination would lead to civil war, and even after civil war the rule would be, to quote the words of another Indian statesman, Mr. Ginnah, "the oligarchy of a small educated minority of Indians over 300,000,000 illiterate peasants.'

In all this I would not say that M. Kahn's fellowship has converted me from a radical into an imperialist. Rather my credo is that British imperialism has its place in the history of world civilization; morally its day may | well worth the effort.

whole preparatory work of universal literacy lies before us. The statesmen of Western countries never seem to realize the enormous divergence in life and institutions between the Orient and the West, and yet this contrast is at once the most obvious and the most intricate discovery of a world traveler.

If one had to express the whole matter in a formula, would say that the life of the West is organized from a political basis, with the state as a unit: in the East it is organized on a religious basis with the family as a unit.

The West is concerned with the means of existence, with material wealth and contentment; it sees no antagonism between the religious life and the multifarious activities of the world in which we live. The East is concerned with the ends of existence; it exalts the supernatural at the expense of the material; and in the development of its religious life all things material, even health and sanitation, are sacrificed.

We are largely concerned with conquering the forces of nature, in dominating the cruder forces of human life and using them for our own fuller evolution. They of the East attempt to ignore the world of matter. I am not herein attempting to glorify the East at the expense of the West: I am merely stating contrasts as they have appealed to my

I went down the Ganges one day in a boat with an American. We watched the pilgrims bathing in the waters of the sacred river: Hindus, both men and women, crowding into "Mother Gunga" to cleanse themselves of sin. The American turned to me and said, "But you should see Atlantic City." Ganges bathing is motivated in a belief in spiritual sanitation, as a religious rite: the beach at Atlantic City is presumably just a form of

+ + + The whole contrast is summarized in a conversation I had in Sanchi with Mr. Ghosal, the librarian to the Begum of Bhopal. We were standing on the hills of Sanchi, where the Buddhist topes have been excavated. It was that moment in the Indian sunset before the evening mists arise when all is russet and blood-red. Mr. Ghosal stood before a figure of a Buddha in the attitude of contemplation.

"I sometimes think," he said, "that the difference between East and West is to be found in that figure. In the West all is activity, struggling with nature, assertiveness; but that figure of the Buddha suggests the consciousness of the East, contemplation and rest, the union with nature, silent worship and solitude."

I wonder if Mr. Kahn's fellowship teaches one the things he hoped they would. It has broken down for me many idola mentis, and yet this remains, that what we should seek in life is not uniformity but diversity, not to thrust Western institutions into all corners of the earth, but to find the fine flower of each varied manifestation of human life.

Uniformity in material things may be desirable. It is well to know that a "lemon freeze" is still a "lemon freeze" in San Diego or on Broadway. But with the human article the appreciation of diversity is the way to unity. It took a year for me to see that; but it proved to be

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in London

A Labor Party cartoon depicts a Liberal rabbit looking at a desperate encounter between a Conservative hippopotamus and a Socialist lion, and saying to itself, "Which shall I help?" It is not surprising, therefore, that the Press Association learns from Labor headquarters that there is nothing in the circumstantial reports which are in circulation here of alliance talks behind the scenes between emissaries from Mr. Lloyd George and Rightwing Labor leaders.

The Liberal Party's future is discussed with knowledge by Prof. Gilbert Murray in the December number of the Contemporary, and editorially in recent issues of the Nation. A similar conclusion is reached in each case. It is that on the co-operation of Liberalism and Labor, or their failure to co-operate, depend the fortunes of the progressive movement in British political life

The fact is that Liberals have come to realize that while neither their own party by itself nor that of Labor has any early prospect of securing a majority in Parliament, the two combined might very well do so.

+ + + The mine owners have now formulated their case for the Royal Coal Commission, and it is upon the whole encouraging. They hold that further large cheapening in the cost of coal production is necessary to enable export trade to be regained and healthy demand for home indus-They believe that such cheapening could tries restored. be effected if the three following changes were made: (a) reversion to the eight-hour day; (b) district regulation of wages and conditions of employment, and (c) reduction of railway rates. The last-named is outside the scope of the Royal Coal Commission, but the mine owners hold that it is essential to bring it in, since they reckon that a saving of no less than 25 per cent in freight charges on goods and minerals, including coal, could be effected if the railway bill were reduced by an amount which would still leave railway workers with a percentage increase of wages over those of 1913 not less than the 61 per cent which the miners enjoy.

One of the oldest schools in London, and one which carries a fine old flavor in its name, is Dame Alice Owen's school in Islington. Interest in it is aroused at the moment by the decision of one of the big city companies to build a new hall for the school. The story of how the school came into being is as follows: Some 300-odd years ago Dame Alice was walking in the fields which then surrounded her little village of Islington. As she walked she passed some archers who were practicing at a mark, and one of their arrows lodged in her high-crowned hat. She there and then decided to show her gratitude for what she regarded as a wonderful deliverance. Although her gratitude did not take immediate shape, she remembered it when she passed that way again some years later. She bought some land in the year 1613, lying between the Welsh Harp at Hendon and the Turk's Head at Islington, and built almshouses and a school for thirty boys. almshouses disappeared, but the school now accommodates 400 boys, and the land, then of little value, has now a rental amounting to £10,000 a year. + + +

That the old English folk songs and dances run little risk of being forgotten is attested by the popularity of the Christmas vacation school which was opened for a week in Chelsea by the English Folk Dance Society. So attractive are these periodical vacation courses that many applicants had to be refused. Over 600 dancing students attended the school from all parts of the country. Displays of dancing by finished performers were given of the Morris dance and the Sword and Country dances. In the Morris dance, performed in turn by six men and six women from the Chelsea Polytechnic, the music was provided by a piano and violin, and by bells worn by the dancers. In conjunction with the school courses, there was a festival during which demonstrations were given by folk dance societies from cities, towns and villages of all sizes. One little village in Yorkshire, with a total population of 120, can boast that about half of them are active members of its dancing society.

What was once the Wembley Exhibition is now no longer, but anyone curious enough to go over the grounds would find that all appears to be in perfect order, even though empty. The roads are clean, and red, and in good repair, and the grass is as green as any grass can be. Periodical sales are still being held, and buyers turn up in the hope of picking up something cheap. There is some talk of a syndicate taking over the exhibition and maintaining it just to pay its rates and taxes for two or three years, and then running another exhibition. But after the experience, financially, of the great 1924-25 exhibition they will be bold financiers indeed who will try to launch another so soon. + +

A one-way traffic scheme is being tried in Parliament Square with considerable success. Any Londoner knows trying delays that generally take place at this center with queues of busses and taxis piling up, to be let loose periodically in a rolling, rumbling avalanche of wheeled ward goes to the far side of Parliament Square near St. Margaret's Church, while all traffic from that direction keeps to its old road, but has the whole of that road to itself. "No forty-bob fine this time," called a bus conductor to his driver as the latter took what used to be the wrong side of a street refuge but was now the right side in the one-way stream. It may not prove to be quite so easy to adapt the one-way system to other congested centers, but that the idea is sound is obvious from the Parliament Square example.

A Practice Commended to Many

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: I wish to relate a practice of mine which I acquired some time ago, as it seems to increase in enjoyment to me in such degree that I should like to pass it on to

Since becoming an habitual reader of the Monitor, among its many meritorious points I have appreciated the fact that I could rely on the advertisers as being trustworthy merchants with whom to deal. So I take pleasure in introducing myself to them as one who has noted their advertisements in the Monitor, and thus we immediately establish a friendly basis of negotiation.

Needless to say, the results are always productive of good. I find it also a profitable practice to read over the advertisements of those merchants from my home city who advertise in the Monitor, and acquaint myself with their names and products.

When I pass the store of such an one, if it is one not before familiar, I recall that here is a friend who sometime might serve me. In traveling I never fail to refer to the Monitor to determine what hotel I may stop at, or where I might eat, my experiences always terminating in satisfactory results.

This is a service which the Monitor is rendering with results which I cannot but contrast with former annoyances in trying to purchase reliable goods and receive satisfactory public accommodations. Oakland, Calif
